When buildings are demolished, they come down in many different stages. Stage one is the preparation of the building, stage two destruction, then clearing away of the rubble.

As the dust and debris settled, It was apparent that we were on a mission to build a new state of the art civil hospital and this was just the beginning of many changes that we will see over the next three years.

Bill Rhode, Chief of Security holds one of the bricks from the old patient library which will be given to Jack Silver, CEO who was unable to attend due to prior commitment.

As a small group of about 20 people looked on, the first hit to the Patient Library took place at approximately 8AM on September 18th, 2000. This has been along time coming. and for many of the staff it was almost as heart wrenching to see the wall fall as it will be exciting to watch the new hospital take shape.

One of the cottages on Fillmore being torn down to make room for the new civil hospital. These cottages had many functions in years past. They served as homes for staff, offices for community agencies, Transitional Living Centers, and a Crisis Nursery.

Fence area were construction equipment can access the hospital grounds from the Fillmore area allowing for less disturbance to the activity of the hospital grounds.

Several of the cottages on Fillmore have been boarded up for a long time due to the buildings unsafe conditions. However, some of the cottages were being used by outside agencies, SOON, and A.A.M.I., and others.

All the cottages are surrounded by a secure fence. This is to prevent any possibility of injury to persons wandering on to the grounds. It also helps to secure the construction equipment. Dave Manoz of Special Projects in photo securing the Fillmore gate.

Exterior entrance to the Rehab building. Picnic tables were placed around the interior of the front lawn so patients and staff could enjoy the nice outdoor setting.

Back recreation area of the Adolescent Treatment area. The Encanto building was self contained, 16 bed facility that included living area, dining room and school rooms, as well as offices for the support staff.

The Arizona State Hospital maintained it's own morgue. They would hold the deceased until the county coroner arrived to certify the cause of death. It was housed in the same building as the hospital laboratory.

Interior area of the Rehab building on the grounds of the Arizona State Hospital. The Rehab building is due to be demolished around the 18th of September 2000.

More interior of the old Rehab building just before the demolition took place.

This area has seen many patient activities over the years. Dances, groups, ceramics, and socialization activities.

Interior of the rehab building. Many offices were housed in this building for the Rehab therapist, Cota's and OT staff.

Day room and nursing station of the ATU unit before it was demolished.

Front entrance of the ATU building. The walls had to have asbestos removed before the building could be demolished.

Some of the Patients artwork was still on the walls when the building was torn down

Modulars being prepared for Security, Social Services and Unit Managers Supervisors and other support staff. They are scheduled to move into these buildings the middle of March 2001.

Three of the buildings being readied for the support staff of the hospital.

Inmate labor is used to do a large part of the construction work on grounds. During the time that they are on grounds, they are supervised by Department of Correction Officers as well as Arizona State Hospital Staff.

Piles of old cement litter the lot of the new hospital while new power equipment is being brought in to be installed for the construction of the new civil hospital.
